Walker's field and Dad Gimlin was to end.

When the teams entered the home stretch they were tied with a 3 to 3 score and it looked like another one of those extra inning contests. In the last half of the ninth the first two Salt Lakers to face Blexrud went out.

Page came up and after swinging twice tural result faster work was seen. Rodney Badger again showed up at his best form yesterday, and his play was followed by an interesting crowd from start to finish. McGregor was his opponent in yesterday's game and succeeded in winning the first set. Badger Page came up and after swinging twice at the ball and missing, it did not look appured the second, and when the deciding and the second, and when the deciding and the second and when the deciding and the second and when the deciding and the second and the secon particularly bright for the locals. On the next swing Page connected with to withstand the vicious cut to left-the ball on the end of his bat and sent a hot liner down by third, the ball go-ing fair by about one-sixteenth of an inch and Page landed on second. Gunn came up with a stinging single and Page scored the winning run.

The game was a pitcher's battle be-tween Blexrud and Jensen, both doing great work. The hits were five to four in Blexrud's favor. Ogden supported her team much better than did the locals. Beck started in at short, but after he had dropped two he was sent to the right field, as he was suffering from a bad hand. Here he distinguished himself with a long running fly, converting it into a double. Douglas made a sensational stop at second and doubled a man out after falling and rolling over to the base.

ERROR WAS DISCOVERED.

Washington, June 30.—By a clerical error, the $3,000,006 appropriation for a site for a government building at Washington was left in the copy of the sundry civil bill put before the president for his signature, although the item had been legislated out of the measure. The president had just signed the bill when the mistake was discovered. The error was corrected by passing a bill in both houses specifically repealing the appropriation.

King Edward's Chauffeurs.

In order that he may have on officer always with him, several men of Scotland Yard have been trained as chauffeurs for King Edward VII. This is a simplification King Edward VII. This is a simplifica-tion of matters that is suggestive. So many new inspectors, deputy inspectors, constables, etc., have been appointed in some states to look after automobilists that it would be an economy for the state if they were trained as chauffeurs and then a law passed compelling every mo-torist to employ one. Thus the automo-bilist who is considered as a sort of tick-et-of-lleave man, would be constantly un-der police surveillance.

Merits Shown in Long Tour.

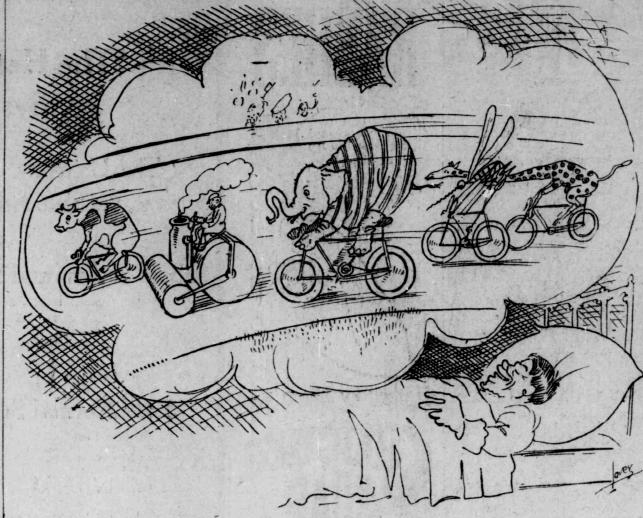

When conducted under adequate rules, long-distance tours are better than races for yielding practical information to buyers concerning the merits of cars for general road service, and the year is rich with promise in this respect. The two big tours abroad and the Glidden contest here will have a value and an interest for the general public greater even than the Grand Prix in France and the Vanderbilt cup race here. A likely development of the year's touring tests will be a chance to fairly compare the merits of American to fairly compare the merits of American and foreign cars, several entries of imported cars being promised for the Glidden tour, notably a Fiat and an Panhard. Something about the relative touring merits of American and foreign cars is to be learned from abroad also this year, even before the Glidden contest, as one of the best American cars made is competing in both the big tours of Europe. It is unfortunate that there should be only one such, because the percentage of chance is unfair. The odds against him are too great to hope for victory by the single American entry in the Herkomer tour or the European circuit. Should he meet with mishap and fail, it would be the failure of 100 per cent of the American cars entered; whereas, were there several cars of the same sort competing, as there are of the foreign makes, one of them might meet with accident, yet one of the others win the contest.

Racers Cost Money.

As indicating the expense and care necessary in the construction of a Vanderbilt racer, one detail of the experience of the Maxwell-Briscoe Motor company in the construction of the car which is to take part in the elimination trials in September is illustrative. J. D. Maxwell, the designer and constructor of the car, was desirous of ascertaining the condition of the cylinder walls and possible defects in structure, due to the slipping of the core in casting. Several cylinders were first cast, then machined, and afterward broken in order to inspect the thickness of the walls, this being the best way to ascertain conditions with regard to the racer's cylinders. As indicating the expense and care nec-
